

A PROPOSAL FOR DR. UMA RANGARAJAN, MD

Fredericksburg has a world-class med spa. Now let's make sure the right people know it.

iLamai Med Spa is run by a triple board-certified physician with a service menu that competes with practices in major metro markets — and a reputation already at 4.9 stars. The gap is not quality. It's visibility, and the way that visibility converts into booked patients. This is the plan to close that gap.

SECTION 01 — CURRENT REALITY

Where iLamai stands right now, and why it matters.

The clinic is exceptional. The credentials are uncommon. The care is personal and holistic in a way most med spas in this market can't claim. What isn't yet working is the translation — the process of turning that excellence into the kind of digital presence that makes a stranger in Fredericksburg trust iLamai before they've ever walked through the door.

WHAT IT BECOMES WITH THE RIGHT STRATEGY

The most trusted med spa voice in the Fredericksburg market.

- 1,030 Instagram followers — growing slowly, converting rarely
- Facebook page with 73 followers, content mirrored from Instagram
- YouTube channel with one indexed video — enormous potential, completely untapped
- Captions that describe services rather than speak to the person who needs them
- Dr. Uma's expertise buried inside a content calendar that looks like everyone else's
- No clear content strategy turning casual viewers into consultation bookings

- Instagram built around trust content — Dr. Uma's voice front and center, fear addressed directly, CTAs that move followers into DMs
- Facebook rebuilt with native content, Lead Ads, and local community engagement that Instagram can't replicate
- "Tea Time with Dr. Uma" YouTube series built to rank for high-intent local searches — content that converts and compounds over time
- Every post engineered with a hook, a value proposition, and a clear next step
- Dr. Uma positioned as the go-to physician voice in Fredericksburg for aesthetics, weight loss, hormone health, and whole-body wellness
- Measurable pipeline: social → DMs → consultations → booked patients

SECTION 02 — BRAND POSITIONING

This is what iLamai Med Spa is built to be.

There are med spas in every market. What makes patients choose one and stay loyal to it has nothing to do with the equipment list — it's the provider they trust. The strategy below is built around a specific position: iLamai is the only practice in Fredericksburg where you get a triple board-certified physician who sees you as a whole person, not a treatment menu.

iLamai is not a medspa. It's the closest thing Fredericksburg has to a physician who actually listens.

That's the story the content tells — at scale, consistently, across every platform.

The Authority Pillar

Dr. Uma's triple board certification is a differentiator no local competitor can claim. Every piece of educational content — YouTube, Instagram, Facebook — positions her as the expert who

The Trust Pillar

"Not a one size fits all practice." "We go into the root cause." These aren't taglines — they're the reason patients who've been burned by other practices finally show up. The content makes these promises visible and felt, not

The Access Pillar

The patients most likely to book at iLamai have been quietly thinking about it for years. They don't respond to "book now" buttons — they respond to content that makes them feel seen before they've spent a dollar. Every post at their own pace.

"Where wellness meets aesthetic renewal" — that's the line already on the site. The content strategy's job is to make every post prove that sentence true for someone who's never heard of iLamai before."

SECTION 03 — PLATFORM STRATEGY

What the strategy looks like in practice, per platform.

Each platform has a different job. Instagram builds the relationship. Facebook creates community and captures leads at scale. YouTube builds the long-term authority that compounds. Running all three with one strategy, on one posting schedule, is the reason most med spas stay invisible.

Instagram — Relationship & Conversion

Facebook —
Community & Lead Generation

YouTube —
Authority & Long-Term Discovery

Daily content engineered around the moment someone is almost ready to book — not the moment they already have. Every caption opens with a scroll-stopping hook and closes with a frictionless next step. Dr. Uma's voice is front and center: warm, honest, specific. Reels prioritized for organic reach.

@ILAMAI_MEDSPA

Facebook-native content — longer, conversational, community-forward. Local group engagement in Fredericksburg health and women's wellness communities. Facebook Lead Ads targeting high-intent local audiences (Medical Weight Loss, BHRT, Botox). Duplicate page issue resolved first.

NATIVE FIRST

"Tea Time with Dr. Uma" built out with SEO-targeted episodes on the topics patients are already searching: Medical Weight Loss, BHRT after the FDA label change, Morpheus8, Emsculpt Neo. Each video titles and described for local YouTube search. Content that converts viewers into consultations — and stays relevant for years.

You've been thinking about it for a while. Most people have.

There's no moment where it suddenly feels like the "right time." That's not how it works. The people who finally come in aren't the ones who found the perfect moment — they're the ones who found a practice that made them feel safe Weight loss shouldn't feel like something you have to apologize for wanting.

At iLamai, Dr. Uma approaches Medical Weight Loss the way she approaches everything — by understanding the whole picture. Hormones, metabolism, history, lifestyle. Not a protocol.

The FDA just updated hormone therapy guidelines for the first time in decades. Here's what that actually means for you.

Twenty years of fear kept a lot of women away from treatment that would have helped them. Dr. Uma has been explaining this one-on-one for years. Now it's enough to ask. That's what we're here for.

→ DM "READY" and we'll send you what to expect at a first visit.

Hook: Speaks to the hesitant patient, not the already-decided one.

Not a program. A conversation that starts with you.

→ Link in bio to schedule a private consultation.

Hook: Addresses the shame/embarrassment barrier directly.

time to say it publicly: bioidentical hormone therapy is not what you were told to be afraid of.

→ Save this. Share it with someone who needs to hear it.

Hook: News angle + physician credibility = maximum save/share rate.

SECTION 04 — CONTENT DIRECTION

Five conversations iLamai needs to be having with its audience right now.

These aren't content ideas. They're the specific conversations already happening in your patients' heads — on drives home, in bathroom mirrors, in late-night searches — that iLamai can be the first practice in this market to meet.

01

Why people wait years before they ever book

Most people who end up walking through your door spent years quietly thinking about it first. They were never going to find you through an ad. They find you the moment something you post makes them feel safe enough to finally stop waiting. Every day that fear goes unaddressed in your content is a day someone scrolls past you and books with whoever speaks to it first.

The fear of looking "fake" — the real reason people hesitate

This is the single biggest reason people who want treatment never become your patient. Not price. Not the needle. They're scared of becoming a worse version of themselves in public. The practices winning right now aren't the ones with the prettiest before-and-afters — they're the ones who say the quiet part out loud first. Whoever addresses that fear directly is the one who gets the DM, not the booking page.

The weight loss conversation nobody local is having correctly

This is your highest-intent, most underserved audience in Fredericksburg right now. These patients are already actively looking — they're just too embarrassed to ask anyone in their actual life. The provider who makes it feel private and judgment-free instead of clinical wins that patient before a competitor even gets the chance to.

The hormone therapy window that's open right now

This is a ticking clock. The FDA just changed the warning labels this year after twenty years of fear keeping women away from treatment that actually helps them. Whoever in this market explains that first becomes the name people remember when they're finally ready to ask their doctor about it. Right now nobody local owns that conversation. It's open.

05

The "no judgment, customized" environment Dr. Uma already has

This isn't just a nice line on your website — it's the actual reason people choose one med spa over another with the same equipment and the same treatments. Right now that's buried in your About page where almost nobody reads it. It needs to be the thing people see and feel in every single post, because that's what turns a follower into a booked patient.

SECTION 05 — HOW THIS CONVERTS TO PATIENTS

The path from a stranger to a booked consultation.

Social media doesn't book patients — trust does. Social media accelerates the trust timeline. Here's the specific journey a new patient takes from discovery to consultation under this strategy.

01

Discovery

A Fredericksburg resident sees a Reel, YouTube Short, or Facebook post that speaks directly to something they've been privately thinking about — weight, hormones, feeling older than they want to feel.

02

Recognition

They click to the profile. The grid, the bio, the highlights all reinforce the same message: this is a real physician, this is a real practice, this is a place that gets it.

03

Trust

They watch a Tea Time with Dr. Uma video. Or read a caption that says the thing nobody else says. Or see a before-and-after that looks real instead of filtered. The hesitation starts to soften.

04

Action

A CTA in a post — "DM us READY" or "link in bio for consultations" — gives them a frictionless next step. They don't have to be 100% sure. They just have to be curious enough to send one message.

05

Booked Patient

That DM click becomes a consultation. That consultation becomes a patient. A patient that iLamai treats people, becomes a referral source for the next patient.

iLamai deserves a social presence as exceptional as what happens inside.
